The Drue Heinz Literature Prize

The University of Pittsburgh Press will receive manuscripts during July and August for the sixth Drue Heinz Literature Prize for a collection of short fiction.

The prize consists of $5,000 and publication by the Press. The contest is open to writers who have published book-length collections of fiction or a minimum of three short stories in commercial magazines or literary journals of national distribution. Manuscripts are judged anonymously by a screening panel and by a final judge who is a nationally known author of fiction.

The Drue Heinz Literature Prize was established in 1980 by the Howard Heinz Endowment.

Before sending manuscripts, writers should request the competition rules from: Drue Heinz Literature Prize, University of Pittsburgh Press, Pittsburgh, PA 15260.
